The Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) has converted this paper record to digital format as part of ongoing projects to scan records of the Inventory of Historic Assets of the Commonwealth and National Register of Historic Places nominations for Massachusetts. Efforts are ongoing and not all inventory or National Register records related to this resource may be available in digital format at this time.

The MACRIS database and scanned files are highly dynamic; new information is added daily and both database records and related scanned files may be updated as new information is incorporated into MHC files. Users should note that there may be a considerable lag time between the receipt of new or updated records by MHC and the appearance of related information in MACRIS. Users should also note that not all source materials for the MACRIS database are made available as scanned images. Users may consult the records, files and maps available in MHC's public research area at its offices at the State Archives Building, 220 Morrissey Boulevard, Boston, open M-F, 9-5.

ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION ☒ see continuation sheet

Describe architectural, structural and landscape features and evaluate in terms of other areas within the community.

Chestnut Hill Farm encompasses not only the largest historic farm landscape visible from any road in Southborough, but also includes two well-preserved eighteenth-century farmhouses and a variety of auxilliary buildings and structures spanning several eras of the town's history.

The main entry to the farm is at its south end at Main Street, where Chestnut Hill Road begins between the two eighteenth-century houses at 1 and 2 Chestnut Hill Road, opposite the former farm barn at 144 Main Street. The farm landscape (#957), nearly two hundred acres of rolling fields, meadows and pastures, stretches north on both sides of Chestnut Hill Road all the way to the Wachusett Aqueduct below the old Boston & Albany Railroad bed, and west to Northborough Road. A small apple orchard just north of the outbuildings at 7 and 9 Chestnut Hill, (possibly the 6-acre orchard which is mentioned as a separate parcel in many of the property deeds), is a reminder of one component the farm would have had from its earliest days. Most of the fieldstone walls that line the road appear to date to the nineteenth century.

North of the house at 1 Chestnut Hill Road are the remains of the main farmstead as it looked in the early part of this century. By 1880 a short farm lane, now the drive to the residences at 7 and 9 Chestnut Hill Road, extended east to a cluster of employees' cottages and agricultural outbuildings. Today, an early modern Cape Cod Cottage of about 1940, 5 Chestnut Hill Road, occupies the north part of a former barn site about 20 yards behind the old farmhouse. A high mortared rubble stone wall remains at the northeast corner of its small property; larger sections of the wall are still in place along the road in front of the house, and partly enclosing the yard behind the garage associated with 1 Chestnut Hill.

The lane passes eastward just north of the little house. Aligned along its north side, from west to east, are a small ca. 1900 gable-front barn, a pair of narrow gable-front wagon houses linked by a high wooden gate, a one-story cottage (7 Chestnut Hill Road), a ca. 1930 drop-sided garage, and a second cottage (9 Chestnut Hill Road).

South of the lane, east of 5 Chestnut Hill, are a ca. 1920 round tiled silo with a metal roof, and a small vertical-board barn or large shed that apparently dates to the middle part of this century.

The other cluster of buildings, located about 300 yards to the northwest on both sides of the road, was apparently built between 1880 and 1900. The map of 1898 shows a large barn on the east side of the road. While the building itself is gone, its fieldstone cellar and long east and west ramps now support a late-twentieth-century gable-roofed structure. The main building at 10 Chestnut Hill Road was a combination barn and stable for the Choate horses, now converted to a dwelling. Behind it to the west is a small vertical-board English barn. Just south of the stable, close to the road, is a clapboarded 2-car, hip-roofed garage or equipment shed of about 1920. Typical of its time, this building has exposed rafter ends, and two 10-pane windows on each side.

Architectural description: principal buildings and structures (See Sketch Map; see Data Sheet for minor buildings)

MHC #17 1 Chestnut Hill Road, Maj. Josiah Fay House, 18th-C. (ca. 1757)

2-1/2-story half-house with an extremely rare double jog at the west end, representing the expansion of the long rear leanto at an early date. 3-bay facade with entry at lobby entrance at west end, aligned with chimney. Windows: 6-over-9-sash, with projecting, molded crowns. Wood shutters--louvered on upper windows, paneled at first story. Entry: 6-panel door, surrounded by molded architrave and fluted pilasters (untapered), on plinths, with squat capitals. Shallow frieze, heavy-molded cornice. Trim: molded, boxed cornice with bed molding (no returns); water table. Rear additions: 2-story cross-gabled rear wing, with shed dormer projecting west over leanto roof. Small early-20th-C. hip-roofed entry at northwest rear, supported on Tuscan columns. Shallow hip-roofed screened porch on northeast, with Tuscan columns. Materials: clapboarded, with fieldstone foundation and asphalt shingle roof. Setting: mortared fieldstone wall along roadside, with steps at front, and granite-posted opening on northwest. Specimen plantings in front yard include ca. 110-year-old tall sycamores, beech, hemlocks, spruces, and rhododendrons.

Outbuildings: 2-car mid-20th-C. gable-roofed garage with wood-panel overhead doors. Two small vertical-board sheds of twentieth-century date stand a short distance northeast of the house.

16 2 Chestnut Hill Road Peter Fay House (ca. 1780)

Large 5- by 4-bay 2 1/2-story double-pile late-Georgian house with side-gabled roof. Windows: 6-over-6-sash, with louvered wood shutters. 1-story polygonal bay window on each end with 8/8 in center. Triple 6/6 under west gable, paired window under east gable. Entry: wide Federal Revival type with open, dentiled pediment over elliptical leaded fanlight. 4-panel door. 3-pane sidelights over paneled aprons. Trim: Narrow cornerboards; large overhanging unboxed cornice with large sawcut scroll brackets represents late-19th C. alteration. Wings and ells: long 1 1/2-story NE wing dating at least to mid-19th C. or earlier; 2/2 windows at upper story, 6/6 and 10/10 at first; modern sliding door and 9-pane glass and wood door on east elevation. Other features: long early-20th-C. wooden terrace across front, with square dowels and posts. Materials: clapboard, slate roof, granite-block foundation. Setting: century-old trees include large beech, maples, rhododendrons. Swimming pool northwest of house.

Outbuildings: 1-story clapboarded cottage (#379) at rear (possibly converted early-20th-C. chicken coop). 3-bay facade faces east, with 8/12 windows, paneled door with pilastered surround. Open porch on NE end under gable hood.

(see Data Sheet)HISTORICAL NARRATIVE [x] see continuation sheet

Explain historical development of the area. Discuss how this area relates to the historical development of the community.

Now a combination of five large parcels, with seven separate residences, this area is significant throughout most of Southborough's history as one farm. It belonged to at least three generations of the Fay family in the eighteenth- and nineteenth centuries, and to at least three more "gentleman" farmers in the late-nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Chestnut Hill Farm, a name the property apparently acquired in about 1880, still comprises one of Southborough's most beautiful collections of agricultural resources. While some outbuildings have been lost, others added or converted to residential use, and an early-twentieth-century Cape Cod cottage stands on the site of a former barn, the historic character of the buildings, structures, and landscape here represents a rare survival of rural resources that have evolved over the course of nearly 250 years.

The beginnings of the farm are represented by the house at 1 Chestnut Hill Road. Singled out on the map of 1898 as being 200 years old, more reliable sources imply that this half-house/saltbox was built sometime between the 1727 incorporation of the town and about 1770. By one account, part of this structure is the house of William Johnson, Jr. (1689-1757), eldest son of William Johnson, one of the first proprietors and principal founder, with William Ward, of the town. William Johnson, Jr. was a blacksmith as well as a farmer. He moved to Worcester well before his death, and apparently sold the house and surrounding farm to his brother, Ebenezer Fay.

Other sources put the construction date of the house to its acquisition in about 1757 (the year of William Johnson, Jr.'s death,) by John Lyscom, who sold it, with 21 acres, to Josiah Fay in 1772. The deeds for that transfer refer to it as being in the northeast angle of the roads, and the house "where Justice [Samuel] Lyscom died." Samuel Lyscom was also one of the original town residents, and may have been the first or second owner of the house.

When at a Town Meeting in the fall of 1774 it was decided to have just one, rather than two town military companies, Josiah Fay (1731-1776) was unanimously chosen as its Captain. As such, he led the Southborough company of Minute Men to Concord on April 19, 1775. He also served in Boston during the British occupation. He enlisted in the Continental Army, and was promoted to Major. He became Southborough's best-known casualty of the Revolution when he was killed by poison in New York City in August of 1776. Born in Westborough, he had come to Southborough about 1750, and married Mary Bent in 1758. At the time of his death he owned 210 acres of land in four parcels, with two houses and a barn.

Mary Bent Fay lived on at 1 Chestnut Hill Road for many years, apparently until her death in 1833. Josiah and Mary had at least ten children, of whom their youngest son Peter Fay, Esq. (1760-1833) built the house at 2 Chestnut Hill Road, probably about 1787. He was a Southborough Selectman, and apparently a Justice of the Peace

In his last years, Peter Fay was one of the major founders of the Pilgrim Evangelical Society, the orthodox Congregationalist group which split off from the town church in 1831, and built its own church southeast of the intersection of Main Street and Cordaville Road in 1834 (Form #31). Before the church was built, most of their early meetings, including one the previous October, when the Rev. George Trask of Framingham preached to 150 "newly awakened people" squeezed into four rooms, were held in the house at 2 Chestnut Hill Road.

Upon Peter Fay's death, the farm and both houses were inherited by his two sons, Temple and Peter Fay. At that time Temple was thirty-four and Peter twenty-six. They apparently ran the farm together for many years, and both may have been operating it for some years while their father was still alive. In 1849, the younger Peter Fay (known in local records as "Deacon" Peter Fay, as he was a longtime Deacon of the Pilgrim Church,) bought out his brother's interest, and became sole owner.

Although it was not quite the largest of Southborough's farms, at $15,000 in 1850 Dea. Peter Fay's farm, then 182 acres, had the highest value of any in town. He had the largest herd of cattle, at 30 head, and grew among the largest amounts of agricultural products, including 400 bushels of corn, 200 of oats, and 40 tons of hay in thay year. His production of 1100 pounds of butter for the commercial market was greater than most of his colleagues,' and of the farmers who were still making cheese, he produced by far the largest amount, 250 pounds. A self-proclaimed "horticulturalist", by his own assessment he had "the best apple orchard in Worcester County," consisting of 2000 trees, and is credited with introducing the Northern Spy apple to the Southborough area. He also grew peaches, cherries, and plums. A progressive and knowledgeable farmer in the forefront of agriculture for his day, he is known to have corresponded with landscape authority Andrew Jackson Downing, from whom he ordered some apple trees. He wrote and lectured widely on fruit culture in particular, and some of his articles appeared in the Massachusetts Ploughman. Dea. Fay served for nine years as a Southorough Selectman, represented the town in the General Court in 1845, and was President of the local temperance society for fifteen years.

Although Dea. Fay, in his Historical Sketches of the Town of Southboro. . . says that he sold his farm to Henry H. Peters in 1861, deeds show that Mr. Peters, (then of West Roxbury), bought it in 1853, the same year that Dea. Fay's first wife, Roxanna, died. Like his predecessor, Mr. Peters also specialized in dairy farming, and had a herd at least partially composed of Ayrshires. Still remembered for his generosity to the town, he was influential in several municipal improvement projects during that time. In 1858 he gave the town dozens of maple saplings, apparently from his farm, to beautify the streets of the center. On the first of May, some of the most eminent townsmen, including Joseph Burnett, turned out to form planting squads to place them as street trees along Main Street and on the small section of the common, then being landscaped in front of the Town Hall. In 1859, after the Pilgrim Evangelical Society had moved back to the second meetinghouse on the common, Mr. Peters purchased the 1834 Pilgrim Church and paid to have it refurbished as a schoolhouse. He then donated the property to the town to be used as a high school. The town gratefully accepted the building, complied with all his conditions, and named it the "Peters High School House" in his honor.

Six years later, in Februrary of 1865, it was Henry Peters who proposed to Town Meeting that the town erect a war memorial to the native soldiers who had died in the Civil War. He challenged his fellow citizens by making the first donation of five hundred dollars, which was quickly matched by many others. $1600 was eventually raised, and Southborough's Soldiers Monument was dedicated on the town common on New Year's Day, 1867.

In 1865, Henry Peters sold the farm to Samuel Appleton and moved closer to Southborough center. While further research will be needed to confirm his identity, this may have been Samuel Appleton, II, second-generation manufacturer in Lowell, affiliated with the Appleton Manufacturing Company, makers of cotton textiles, particularly underwear and stockings. HISTORICAL NARRATIVE, cont.

The Peters-Appleton sale may represent the first in a series of speculative transactions, during which the farm was purchased by some of the wealthiest real estate investors in Massachusetts, some of whom appear to have occupied it briefly as a country estate, while others may never have lived here at all. Mr. Appleton owned the farm for less than two years, and it changed hands three times more before it was again acquired by a relative of Southborough's Fay family. From 1869 to 1871 the owner was James C. Converse, who briefly operated a dairy farm here. In 1870 his property was 203 acres. At that time he (or possibly his predecessor, Frank H. Palmer, who owned the farm from 1867 to 1869) had built a new barn, and at least one of the cottages at 7 or 9 Chestnut Hill Road. The Converse herd, like several at that time in Southborough, apparently consisted of Jerseys, as he had at least one prize Jersey bull. He also appears to have raised horses, as he owned eleven, and housed them in their own horse barn.

In 1871 Mr. Converse, then listed as living in Pennsylvania, sold the farm to another out-of-towner, Joseph Story Fay, Jr., of Falmouth. He owned it for eight years (the last two with his sister, Sarah S. Fay.) Joseph and Sarah Fay were the children of the man considered to be the founder of the summer community in the Woods Hole section of Falmouth. A major shipping magnate in Boston, New York, Georgia, and New Bedford, Joseph Story Fay had established a real estate empire in Falmouth in the lucrative years when it was rapidly developing as a fashionable location for Boston's elite to establish summer homes. In a striking parallel to Joseph Burnett's paternalistic establishment and control over St. Mark's Church in Southborough, in the early 1850s Joseph Story Fay had founded the Episcopal Church in Falmouth in much the same manner. Both generations of that Fay family, including Joseph, Jr. and Sarah, made Falmouth their permanent residence, and owned a large amount of real estate there. At the turn of the century, the second generation--Joseph, Jr., Sarah, and their brother, Henry--paid 9% of the total taxes in Falmouth, and the largest amount of its real estate tax. It is not clear whether Joseph or Sarah used the Southborough farm for a residence, or whether they utilized it as either a commercial or family farm.

In 1879, the 200+-acre farm again changed hands. The purchaser was a member of another of eastern Massachusetts' most prominent families, this one renowned for its eminent lawyers, Charles Francis Choate (1828-1911). He is still remembered today as a longtime Southborough benefactor, of the same generation as Joseph Burnett. At that time a resident of Cambridge, with a law office in Boston, he had made his reputation as counsel for New England's railroad companies in the early years of their operation. In 1878, he became President of the Old Colony Railroad, a post he held until at least 1893. During the same period, he was also President of the Old Colony Steamship Company, and in 1901 became President of the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company.

Charles Choate bought the Southborough farm for a summer residence and country estate. Calling it Chestnut Hill Farm, under his ownership it was the third largest farm in Southborough, surpassed only by the Burnett family's Deerfoot Farm, and soon by the adjoining property to the east, his son-in-law J. Montgomery Sears' Wolf Pen Farm (see Area Form O). In 1897, Charles' Choate's Southborough real estate was valued at $39,050. It included this farm, with 200 acres, plus 169 more in three other pieces to the north along Fisher Road. He had a herd of fifty cows, and owned a bull and nine horses. Just before the turn of the century the property included the main house at 2 Chestnut Hill Road, the older Fay house at 1 Chestnut Hill occupied by his farm manager, (for many years that was a Mr. Metcalf), two rental houses for farm employees (7 and 9 Chestnut Hill), five barns, a granary, a blacksmith shop, a repair shop and ice house, and a greenhouse. His longtime coachman, Richard Millay, lived at 7 Chestnut Hill Road, and in the 1890s the other cottage was occupied by farmer Lawrence Finn and his family. (Cont.)

Mr. Choate's son, Edward C. Choate, gradually acquired a large portion of the property, and was closely involved with some of the farm's operations. In 1881, at the age of twenty-three, he owned the 35-head cow herd, a bull, and 28 horses. By 1900, and apparently until his death in 1905, he owned nearly all the farm land and outbuildings, the house at 1 Chestnut Hill Road, the employees' houses, 22 horses, and what had become a herd of 80 cows.

Upon Edward Choate's death at the age of 47, the property he owned apparently reverted to his father. In 1906, Charles Choate sold the home farm, though not all the outlying land, to financier Samuel Carr of Boston. Mr. Carr was a colleague of several of Southborough's most prominent citizens, including both Charles Choate and George Peabody Gardner, with whom he served on the board of directors of the Old Colony Trust Co. (See Form #19, 94 Main Street.) He bought most of the property for his daughter, Margaret, who married Charles Leland. He built a house for the Lelands on the adjoining property at 130 Main Street, but the two old Fay houses, #s 1 and 2 Chestnut Hill Road, had apparently already been divided out with their own houselots. These were purchased by Newell Bent and his wife Margaret.

Newell Bent had been a teacher at St. Mark's School, but by 1909 he is listed as a broker, probably a stock broker. Further research will be necessary to determine whether he or his wife had any familial connection with the Carrs, Lelands, or Choates. The Bents also bought other parcels of the old farm, some of which they sold separately to Mr. Carr and the Lelands. While the Bents owned and lived at 2 Chestnut Hill, they later apparently sold the barn at 144 Main Street, and the older house at 1 Chestnut Hill to the Lelands.

In 1936, the year that Margaret Leland sold 143 acres of the farm to Charles Donaldson, the Lelands appear to have owned virtually all of Chestnut Hill Farm except the house at 2 Chestnut Hill. The buildings on the farm at that time included the house at 1 Chestnut Hill Road, a large barn, a garage/shed, a repair shop/ice house, and the two employees' cottages.

Charles Leland died in about 1940. Margaret Leland, who lived until 1967, sold most of the rest of the property in the 1950s.

The complex of buildings, structures, and agricultural landscape remaining from the large Chestnut Hill Farm is eligible for the National Register as a district at the local level under Criterion A as the surviving manifestation of one of Southborough's largest, earliest, and most lavish "gentleman's farms." It is highly significant for its association with a long series of prominent owners, including Revolutionary hero Josiah Fay, early- and mid-nineteenth-century Deacons and progressive farmers Peter Fay, Sr. and Jr., Henry H. Peters, donor of the town's high school, State Representative Samuel Appleton, eminent lawyer Charles F. Choate, and prominent twentieth-century gentleman-dairy farmers Margaret and Charles Leland.

The property also meets Criterion C as perhaps Southborough's best-preserved collection of architectural and agricultural resources that illustrate the design and architecture of a gentleman's farm from its origins in the mid-eighteenth century through the 1930s.

The property retains integrity of location, design, materials, workmanship, feeling, setting and association.
