The Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) has converted this paper record to digital format as part of ongoing projects to scan records of the Inventory of Historic Assets of the Commonwealth and National Register of Historic Places nominations for Massachusetts. Efforts are ongoing and not all inventory or National Register records related to this resource may be available in digital format at this time.

The MACRIS database and scanned files are highly dynamic; new information is added daily and both database records and related scanned files may be updated as new information is incorporated into MHC files. Users should note that there may be a considerable lag time between the receipt of new or updated records by MHC and the appearance of related information in MACRIS. Users should also note that not all source materials for the MACRIS database are made available as scanned images. Users may consult the records, files and maps available in MHC's public research area at its offices at the State Archives Building, 220 Morrissey Boulevard, Boston, open M-F, 9-5.

Users of this digital material acknowledge that they have read and understood the MACRIS Information and Disclaimer (<http://mhc-macris.net/macrisdisclaimer.htm>)

Data available via the MACRIS web interface, and associated scanned files are for information purposes only. ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION [] see continuation sheet

Describe architectural features. Evaluate the characteristics of this building in terms of other buildings within the community.

The Baker and William Brigham House is a very large 2 1/2-story early-nineteenth-century farmhouse that has been expanded over the years with a series of compatible additions. The main house is one of several examples in Southborough of a double-pile, side-gabled, four-bay, or "three-quarter" house. Like the similar Jonas Fay House at 25 Jericho Hill Road, it has a pair of large ridge chimneys. In contrast to that building, however, the detailing here is solidly within the Greek Revival, rather than the Federal style. The main entry has full-length, five-pane sidelights, recessed-paneled pilasters, a high frieze, and a horizontal molded cornice. The door has two panels, one above the other. The main house trim repeats the recessed panels at the cornerboards, and has a boxed, molded cornice. Although these details are commonly associated with the fully-developed Greek Revival style of ca. 1830-1850, the lack of any roof overhang at the gable ends supports the traditional pre-1830 date. Additional lingering Federal features include the position of the upper-story windows, which abut the cornice, and the three-quarter house form.

Architectural trim includes cornice returns, a water table just above the granite-block foundation, and molded surrounds at the 6-over-6-sash windows. The windows have louvered wooden shutters of the nineteenth-century type.

A large five-bay, 1 1/2-story nineteenth-century wing extends west from the main block. Its windows are also 6-over-6-sash, including those in a pair of small through-cornice facade dormers with flushboard gables. A long shed dormer, probably dating to the twentieth century, spans the rear roof slope of this section. Abutting the west end of the wing is a four- by two-bay, gable-roofed addition, which appears to date to the first half of the twentieth century. Its roof ridge is parallel to the others, and although the roof line is lower than the wing to the east, this section is a full 2 1/2-stories due to the descending slope of the terrain. It stands on a concrete foundation, and has a large exterior brick chimney in the center of the west gable end. At the opposite end of the building, a 1 1/2-story gable-front ell or large shed abuts the northeast corner of the main house.

Two significant outbuildings stand on this property--a small clapboard and glass greenhouse (#632) about thirty yards west of the house, and a side-gabled, two-story shingled barn (#631) a short distance to the southeast, located near the road at the entrance to the main driveway. The barn, which apparently dates to the nineteenth century, has large 6-over-6-sash windows, and diagonal-board carriage doors in the south side. Standing just southeast of the barn is a modern shingled two-car garage.

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE [x] see continuation sheet

Explain history of the building. Explain its associations with local (or state) history. Include uses of the building, and the role(s) the owners/occupants played within the community.

The Baker and William Brigham House is one of several prominent early-nineteenth-century farmhouses located near today's Route 30 in the rural western part of Southborough known as the "West End." This was an area of prosperous farms, many of which, in addition to marketing their own agricultural products, supplied the large Deerfoot Farm dairy with milk from moderate-sized herds of cows in the second half of the nineteenth century. Granuaile Road, which was continuous with Lynbrook Road to its east, was part of Main Street until the early 1960s, when Route I-495 cut through this part of town. At that time a new section of Main Street was built from the base of Northborough to Ward Roads, and the old part of the street was severed in two just east of this house.

Much of the northwest corner of town to the Westborough line had been the property of the Brigham family since their inheritance of some of the original 1660s allotments of land in what was the south part of Marlborough prior to 1727. This house was apparently built for farmer Baker Brigham (b. 1792) on part of that land. In the early nineteenth century, his was one of several West End farms of about a hundred acres. In 1850, Mr. Brigham was assessed for ninety-eight acres, had what was for that time a large herd of a dozen cows, and was growing sizable crops of hay, rye, corn, oats, and potatoes to feed them.

After Baker Brigham's death in 1868, the farmstead passed jointly to his widow, Fanny (Fay), and his son William Baker Brigham (b. 1827). Some of the original acreage had by that time gone to other family members (cf. Brigham Pond Area, Area Form K), and by 1870 this property had been reduced to 55.5 acres. At that time it had an assortment of specialized outbuildings, including the barn, a carriage house, hog house, and a combined woodshed and granary. William Brigham had a herd of thirteen cows and several calves, and like his father had done, grew hay, corn, oats, and potatoes. Like many of Southborough's post-Civil War farmers, he was also producing butter for sale, and had a modest-sized apple orchard.

William Brigham apparently expanded the farm through the 1870s. By 1880 it covered 186 acres, and its yearly milk production had risen from under a thousand to over 10,400 gallons--the largest production in the West End. While he was no longer making butter, Mr. Brigham now had a flock of ten chickens, and three hundred bearing apple trees.

In addition to his vocation as a farmer, as a young man William Brigham was a teacher in the Southborough schools. He was also one of the town's most vocal nineteenth-century reformers, participating in debates at the Southborough Lyceum, and advocating abolition and the rights of women, in particular.

William Brigham died in 1889, and for at least a decade the property was owned by his heirs. Farmer Horace Wheeler owned the house by 1909, and had sixteen cows, a bull, and three horses on a farm that had been reduced to 48 acres. Other owners of the farm in the twentieth century, during which time the property was further subdivided, included Richard Harwood, and Esther Bushman, who extensively restored the house in the middle of the century.

Statement of Significance by Forbes/Schuler, Consultants

The criteria that are checked in the above sections must be justified here.

The well-preserved Baker and William Brigham House meets Criterion C of the National Register at the local level as one of several examples in Southborough of a double-pile, side-gabled, four-bay, or "three-quarter" house of the early part of the nineteenth century, as well as for its stylish Greek Revival details.

The property is also significant under Criterion A as a sizable remnant of one of the many prosperous late eighteenth- and nineteenth century farms in the outlying agricultural area known as Southborough's "west end," measuring a hundred acres in the middle of the nineteenth century, and, like its neighbors, supplying milk to Deerfoot Farm. It is also significant for its association with at least two generations of the Brigham family, original Southborough property owners and founders of several farms in that part of town, as well as an illustration, under William Brigham, of one of the most prosperous agricultural operations in town in the 1880s. In addition to his vocation as a farmer, as a young man William Brigham was a teacher in the Southborough schools. He was also one of the town's most vocal nineteenth-century reformers,

In spite of the recent development of much of the old farmland around it, the house retains integrity of location, design, materials, workmanship, setting, feeling, and association.
