The Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) has converted this paper record to digital format as part of ongoing projects to scan records of the Inventory of Historic Assets of the Commonwealth and National Register of Historic Places nominations for Massachusetts. Efforts are ongoing and not all inventory or National Register records related to this resource may be available in digital format at this time.

The MACRIS database and scanned files are highly dynamic; new information is added daily and both database records and related scanned files may be updated as new information is incorporated into MHC files. Users should note that there may be a considerable lag time between the receipt of new or updated records by MHC and the appearance of related information in MACRIS. Users should also note that not all source materials for the MACRIS database are made available as scanned images. Users may consult the records, files and maps available in MHC's public research area at its offices at the State Archives Building, 220 Morrissey Boulevard, Boston, open M-F, 9-5.

ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION [x] see continuation sheet

Describe architectural, structural and landscape features and evaluate in terms of other areas within the community.

Stonedale Farm, one of the few working dairy farms remaining in Southborough, presents several building types characteristic of farms that were developed in eastern Massachusetts in the Early Modern period. The farmstead and most of the buildings are located close to the north side of the road, opposite the railroad bed of the former Agricultural Branch/NY, NH, & Hartford Railroad, with the rocky, hilly terrain of the farm's 36 acres rising behind them. Typical of much of the farmland in the north part of Southborough, the agricultural landscape (#960) visible from the street is largely rolling pasture land, with some rock outcroppings and intermittent clumps of trees.

Two small, simply-detailed Early-Modern Craftsman houses stand close to the street at either end of the farmstead. 36 Fisher Road, on its own small parcel, is a 2 1/2-story gable-front house, with a freestanding garage (#391) of about 1930. 48 Fisher Road is a wide Craftsman bungalow with a large gabled facade dormer projecting over a wide front porch. Between them is the main complex of barns and outbuildings, dominated by a large gambrel-roofed cow barn (#393) typical of one of the designs promoted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the early part of this century. Linked to the long south wall of the barn, between it and the road, is a rare surviving milkhouse (#392) of rock-faced concrete block, with a high hipped roof. Abutting the rear wall of the main barn, only partially visible from the street, is a connected pair of round silos (#959), one of them with battered walls. Just northeast of the barn is a three-bay open equipment/tractor shed (394), with a later 2-car garage attached to its south end. A small gable-roofed, vertical-board shed stands just east of the tractor shed, and up the hill to the northeast is a small one-story mid-twentieth-century, altered cottage.

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE [] see continuation sheet

Explain historical development of the area. Discuss how this area relates to the historical development of the community.

Stonedale Farm is one of the few farms in Southborough which was apparently developed almost completely anew in the twentieth century. It was established as a dairy, and continues as such today. The farm occupies the site of one of only two Fisher Road farms that were located east of Jericho Hill Road in the nineteenth century. The main farmer here for several decades, through 1870, was Hugh Riley, who had a farm of forty acres, where he raised a few cows and pigs. He was succeeded later in the century by Willie N. Cooper--primarily a poultry farmer. He was here until at least 1913, and in his time the property measured about 28 acres.

The old farmhouse burned down shortly after that, and was replaced by one of the two houses at 36 or 48 Fisher Road. The old barn was small, and does not appear to have survived, either. The owner of the Riley/Cooper Farm by 1936 was Andrew F. Bigelow, who was associated with the Bigelow family who had carried on farming on Ward Road in the West End, and in the area of what is now Bigelow Road. At the height of the Depression Mr. Bigelow had a herd of over twenty cows, and had built the present barn, milk house, and one of the silos.

By the late 1930s or early 1940s the second house had been built on the farm, apparently for Donald Banks, who sold it in 1951 to the Chernewski family. At the same time Andrew Bigelow or his heirs sold the larger part of the farm, with the house at 48 Fisher Road, to the Wright family.
